Message

I extend my warm greetings and heartfelt congratulations on the organization of the US–India Legacy 250 Symposium at the historic Fullerton Hall of the Art Institute of Chicago, the very venue where Swami Vivekananda delivered his timeless message on September 11, 1893. The thoughtful program you have curated—bringing together scholars, community leaders, innovators, and cultural institutions—reflects a deep commitment to celebrating and strengthening the long arc of India–America connections.

The US–India Legacy 250 initiative has emerged as an inspiring platform that documents, honors, and disseminates the shared intellectual, cultural, and democratic heritage of our two nations. Your work in developing exhibitions, multimedia presentations, and community dialogues plays an important role in educating younger generations and deepening public understanding of this remarkable journey.

I also commend the Art Institute of Chicago for its partnership and support, Indiaspora for its leadership in mobilizing the Indian American community, and the Vivekananda Vedanta Society for its spiritual and cultural contributions to the event.

The Embassy of India deeply appreciates initiatives that strengthen India–US friendship, highlight our shared democratic values, and showcase the contributions of Indian Americans to the United States. The Legacy 250 Symposium stands out as a thoughtful and impactful effort in this direction.

I congratulate the organizers, partners, volunteers, and participants for bringing this important event to life. I wish the Symposium great success and look forward to its continued contributions to the India–US partnership.
